Introduction

What is Digital Marketing?

Digital marketing is an essential part of modern business strategy. It is a method of advertising that uses digital channels, such as the internet and social media, to promote a business. The advantage of digital marketing is that it allows businesses to reach a wider audience more quickly and effectively than traditional forms of advertising, such as print or television ads.

In the past, businesses relied heavily on traditional forms of advertising, such as print ads in newspapers and magazines or television commercials. However, the rise of the internet and digital technologies has changed how businesses reach and engage with their customers. Digital marketing allows businesses to reach customers and prospects in real-time and to track the effectiveness of their efforts.

One of the key advantages of digital marketing is its ability to target specific audience segments. Through the use of data and analytics, businesses can create highly customized marketing campaigns that are tailored to specific groups of customers or prospects. This allows businesses to better understand their customers and target their efforts more effectively.

Digital marketing is also highly measurable and trackable. Unlike traditional forms of advertising, which can be difficult to measure, digital marketing allows businesses to track the results of their efforts in real time. This allows businesses to see which tactics are working and which ones are not and to adjust their efforts accordingly.

Overall, digital marketing is a powerful tool for businesses of all sizes. It allows businesses to connect with their customers and prospects in a more meaningful way and to track the results of their efforts in real time. Whether used on its own or in conjunction with traditional forms of advertising, digital marketing is an essential component of modern business strategy.

Ode

To Digital Marketing

---

"O digital marketing, how sweet thy ways Thou art the lifeblood of modern days With thy algorithms and thy data sets Thou dost drive commerce and inspire bets

In thy endless streams of information
Lies the key to transformation
With thy power to reach and engage
Thou dost drive the world to a new age

O digital marketing, thou art the spark
That lights the fire of every heart
Thou dost connect us, far and wide
And with thy power, we cannot hide

So let us embrace thee, O digital one
And in thy light, our work be done
For thou art the future, bright and bold
And with thee, our success is untold."

Step 1: Research

Conduct Research About Your Business

Researching your business is essential when you're just getting started.

The first thing you need to do is find out where people go for content like yours, whether on social media, in their email inboxes, or even in their search results. You want to know where your audience is so that you can create content for them and reach out to them at the right time.

There are a few different tools, like SEMrush and Google Analytics, that you can use to do this research. Google Analytics, for example, lets you see what keywords people searched for that led them to your site or what other sites they visited before coming to yours. You can also use Facebook Insights and Twitter Analytics to see how many likes, shares, and retweets each post got. These tools will help you determine what kinds of content people are most interested in seeing from you and how they're finding it! To get started, you can even use Google SERP to conduct this research.

Activity

Based on your business, choose 10 keywords and put them into the table below. Then enter each keyword into Google to see other similar keywords as well as how many times this keyword gets searched. Fill in the table below to get an idea of how much demand there is for your chosen keywords.

| Keyword    | Number of results            | Similar keywords suggested by Google            |
|------------|------------------------------|---|
| Eg. Shorts | About 25,270,000,000 results | Shorts for girls, shorts for women, shorts suit |
|            |                              |   |
|            |                              |   |
|            |                              |   |
|            |                              |   |
|            |                              |   |

Conduct Research About Your Target Customers

When you're just getting started with your business, it can be hard to know who your target customers are.

You've got an idea for a product or service, and you're excited about it! But how do you find out if other people will be excited about it too? That's through research. Research helps you understand who your potential customers are and what they want from you. It also helps you figure out what kind of language to use when talking about your product or service so that people can understand what it does and why they would want it. First of all, why do you need to do research? Because it will help you figure out what kind of products or services they want and need, which will help you ensure that the business you create will have a customer base. That way, when you're ready to launch, you can actually find those customers—and not just hope someone will walk in off the street someday.

There are several ways to do this research: surveys, focus groups, interviews, and more!

Activity

By the end of the below exercise, you will have a better understanding of your buyer personas, in effect, who you need to target. Use the below sheet to list any assumptions that you may have about your target audience as well as the reason for these assumptions. The survey question will help determine whether or not your assumption is correct and if this persona is a good representation of who you want to target.

| Buyer Personas                    | Who you think this person is | Why you think this person is that way | How to prove or disprove your assumption | Is this person a match for your business |
|-----------------------------------|------------------------------|---------------------------------------|--|--|
| Buyer Persona 1: Marketing Martha | Marketing Martha is _____    | I think she is _____ because _____    | Survey question:                         | Yes/No                                   |
|                                   |                              |                                       |  |  |
|                                   |                              |                                       |  |  |
|                                   |                              |                                       |  |  |

Conduct Research About Your Product

Researching the product you want to market gives you a greater understanding of what your customers want and need, which will help you to meet those needs in a way that is relevant and helpful.

You can find out what your customers are looking for in terms of features and benefits, and you can find out if there are any other products that already offer these features and benefits. This will help you make sure that your product is different enough from the competition but not so different that it seems like it doesn't belong in the same category.

There are a lot of tools available for doing this kind of research. You can read reviews online, talk to current users of similar products, talk with salespeople at stores that sell similar products, or even talk with people who don't use similar products but might be interested in them if they were easier to use or had some additional benefits.

There are a few different tools you can use for research. One of them is Google. You can use Google's Keyword Planner tool to search for keywords related to your business and see how many searches there are per month on Google for each keyword. This gives you an idea of how much demand there is for each keyword, which can help you determine what keywords are best for reaching out to potential customers.

Let's Get Started With Your Research!

1. Begin by identifying the key questions you want to answer through your research. These might include:

- Who are your target customers?
- What are the key features and benefits of your product?
What are your competitors offering, and how does your product compare?
- What is the current market demand for your product

2. Once you have identified your key research questions, it's time to gather data to help answer them. There are several ways you can do this, including:

Online research: Use search engines and industry websites to gather information about your target market, competitors, and the current demand for your product.

Surveys and polls: Create surveys or polls and distribute them to your target audience to gather feedback about your product and its features.

Interviews: Conduct interviews with potential customers, competitors, or industry experts to gather insights and opinions about your product and the market.

3. As you gather data, be sure to organize it in a way that makes it easy to analyze and draw conclusions. This might mean creating a spreadsheet or other data management tool to help you sort and analyze your findings.

4. Once you have gathered and organized your data, it's time to analyze it and draw conclusions. This might involve looking for patterns or trends in your data, comparing your findings to industry benchmarks or trends, or conducting a more in-depth analysis to answer your specific research questions.

5. Finally, use your research findings to inform your business decisions and strategy. This might mean making changes to your product, adjusting your marketing efforts, or developing a new business plan based on your research.

Remember, conducting research is an ongoing process, and it's important to continue monitoring and gathering data to ensure that your business is staying on track and meeting the needs of your customers.

Fill out the table below by researching your competitors' products and comparing them to their own. This will help you identify areas where your product stands out, as well as areas where you might need to improve or differentiate yourself from your competitors.

Once the table is completed, you can use it to inform your business decisions and strategy. For example, you might use the information in the table to adjust your pricing, highlight your product's unique features, or gather customer feedback to improve your product.

|                             |                                    |         |                  |
|                             |                                    |         |                  |
|                             |                                    |         |                  |
|                             |                                    |         |                  |
|                             |                                    |         |                  |
|                             |                                    |         |                  |
| Your Product                |                                    |         |                  |
| Your Product                |                                    |         |                  |
| Your Product                |                                    |         |                  |
| Your Product                |                                    |         |                  |

It's important to do research about your competitors when you're just getting started with your business because it will help you to understand what the competition is doing and how they are approaching it. You can also use this information to see where you might be able to improve on their approach.

Use tools like Google Analytics and Google Keyword Planner to do competitor research. These tools will allow you to see what keywords people are searching for and how often they're searching for them. This can give you an idea of what problems people are having that need solutions, which can help you create content around those problems.

Today, one of the most popular tools to use for competitor research is Google Alerts. This tool allows you to set up notifications for any website that you want to track. You can set up alerts for specific keywords or for specific websites—and then receive an email every time something happens on the web that relates to that keyword or site.

Activity

Conduct Research About Your Competitors

Conducting competitor research is an essential part of modern business strategy. By gathering information about your competitors, you can better understand the market, identify areas where you can differentiate your business, and develop strategies to position yourself ahead of the competition. In this activity, you can use tools like Google Alerts and Google Trends to gather information about your competitors, and you will use that information to inform your business decisions and strategy.

*Are you ready to start your competitor research scavenger hunt?
Let's get started!*

1. Find answers to the following questions about your competitors.
You can use free tools like Google Trends, UberSuggest, and SEMrush.

| Question   | Answer |
|--|--------|
| Who are your competitors?  |        |
| What is the size and scope of your competitors' businesses?        |        |
| What is the history and background of your competitors?            |        |
| What is the market share of your competitors?                      |        |
| What advantages do your competitors have in the industry?          |        |
| What are your competitors' target markets and customer segments?   |        |
| What channels do your competitors use to reach their customers?    |        |
| What are your competitors' key sources of revenue?                 |        |
| What partnerships or collaborations do your competitors have?      |        |
| What are your competitors' key milestones and achievements?        |        |
| What is the financial performance of your competitors?             |        |
| What are the reputation and public perception of your competitors? |        |

2. Once you have found the answers to the questions above, use the information to inform your business decisions and strategy. For example, you might:

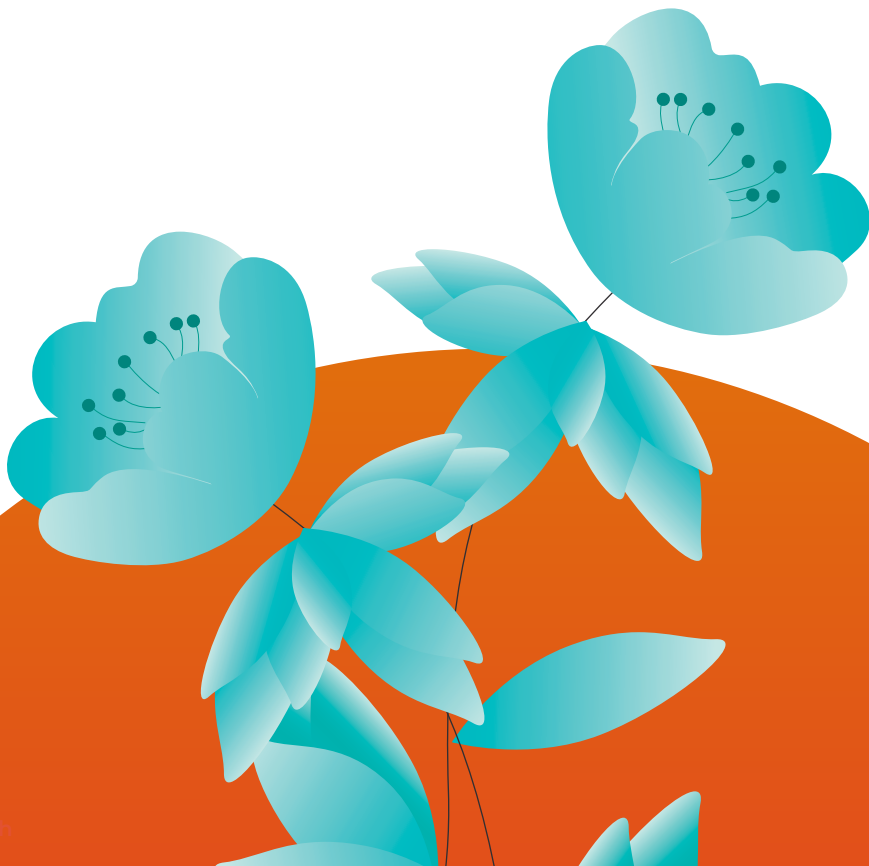

- Identify areas where you can differentiate your business from your competitors
- Develop strategies to capitalize on your competitors' weaknesses
- Monitor your competitors' activities and adjust your own strategies accordingly

Remember, conducting competitor research is an ongoing process, and it's important to continue monitoring and gathering information about your competitors to ensure that you stay ahead in the market.

Thoughts, Feelings, & Notes

Step 2: Create

Create Digital Marketing Objectives For Your Business

Creating digital marketing objectives for your business helps you to focus on what you're trying to accomplish and why. Without clear intentions, it can be difficult to track progress and success.

When creating digital marketing objectives, you should start by asking yourself why you want to do this in the first place. Is it for customer acquisition? Brand awareness? Lead generation? Whatever your goal is, make sure that it's specific, measurable, and attainable.

Creating these objectives is a multi-step process that involves identifying your business goals and creating a list of what you want to accomplish with digital marketing. You'll want to know what types of customers you're trying to reach, what problems they have that your product/service will solve, and how you will reach them.

Once you've done this research and made your list, it's time to prioritize it. Move all the things at the top of your list into one list called "priority 1" items. If there are items that aren't as important but still need attention, move them into a second list called "priority 2". Finally, make sure you have a timeline for when each objective should be completed by so that nothing gets left behind!

Once you've decided on your goals, you can start identifying what metrics will help you measure those goals.

There are several ways to go about creating these objectives:

- Define what success looks like for your company. This can include things like increased traffic, increased sales conversions, and/or increased brand awareness.
- Write down these goals in a place where you can refer back to them regularly.
- Make sure the goals align with your overall business strategy and vision.

Activity

Creating clear and specific digital marketing objectives is an essential part of any successful digital marketing strategy. By setting goals and targets for your digital marketing efforts, you can better align your efforts with your overall business goals, and you can track and measure the success of your efforts. In this activity, you will use a worksheet to brainstorm and identify your digital marketing objectives, and you will develop a plan for achieving those objectives.

Digital Marketing Objectives Brainstorming Worksheets

1. Overall goal (e.g. increase brand awareness, drive traffic to their website, increase sales:

2. Once you have found the answers to the questions above, use the information to inform your business decisions and strategy. For example, you might:

Identify areas where you can differentiate your business from your competitors

Develop strategies to capitalize on your competitors' weaknesses

Monitor your competitors' activities and adjust your own strategies accordingly

Remember, conducting competitor research is an ongoing process, and it's important to continue monitoring and gathering information about your competitors to ensure that you stay ahead in the market.

By completing this activity, you will be better equipped to develop comprehensive digital marketing objectives and overall strategy for your business.

Create A Strategy To Achieve The Defined Business Goals

Your strategy is a plan of action to ensure you don't waste time or money on things that don't help you get closer to your goals.

To create this strategy, you should have a list of all the things that need to be done in order for you to reach your goal. The first thing that needs to be done is to write down all the steps that need to be done before achieving this goal. Then, break down each step and make them smaller so they are easier to accomplish.

Once you've done this, the next step is to figure out how you will get there. So write down all the things that need to be done for each step to be accomplished. This means that you need to know what resources are available for you and what skills you'll need to make it happen. You can refer to your responses in the previous activity.

Positioning Strategy

A positioning strategy—also known as a market or brand positioning strategy—is a type of marketing strategy that focuses on distinguishing a brand from its competitors.

The goal of a positioning strategy is to influence consumer perception by effectively communicating a brand's competitive advantage. This can be done through branding and marketing tactics such as messaging, advertising, social media, and more!

Activity

1. Use the following game board to develop a brand positioning statement for your own brand:

|---------------|---|
| STEP 1 | Identify your target market and customer segments Who are your potential customers? What are their needs, wants, and preferences? Example: Our target market is young professionals in the tech industry. They value convenience and efficiency, and they are looking for innovative solutions to their business challenges. Your answer:   |
| STEP 2 | Identify your brand's unique value proposition and competitive advantage What makes your brand unique and different from your competitors? How does your brand solve your customers' needs and challenges in a better way than your competitors? Example: Our brand's unique value proposition is our cutting-edge technology and user-friendly interface. We offer a complete suite of tools for project management, collaboration, and communication, all in one platform. Our competitors offer separate solutions for each of these functions, making them less convenient and efficient for our target customers. Your answer: |

STEP 3

Identify your brand's target position in the market

What makes your brand unique and different from your competitors? How does your brand solve your customers' needs and challenges in a better way than your competitors?

Example: Our brand's unique value proposition is our cutting-edge technology and user-friendly interface. We offer a complete suite of tools for project management, collaboration, and communication, all in one platform. Our competitors offer separate solutions for each of these functions, making them less convenient and efficient for our target customers.

Your answer:

STEP 4

Develop a clear and concise brand positioning statement that effectively communicates your brand's unique value proposition and target position

Use your answers to the previous steps to create a simple and compelling statement that summarizes your brand's unique value proposition and target position.

Example: Our brand positioning statement is "Innovative solutions for the tech industry. One platform, endless possibilities." This statement effectively communicates our brand's unique value proposition (innovative solutions) and target position (leading provider for the tech industry) in a clear and concise way.

Your answer:

|---------------|--|
| STEP 5 | Review and refine your brand positioning statement, and test it with potential customers to ensure that it effectively communicates your brand's unique value proposition and target position.                                       |
| STEP 6 | Use your brand positioning statement to inform your branding and marketing efforts, and track and measure its effectiveness to ensure that it is effectively communicating your brand's competitive advantage to your target market. |

1. Follow the steps on the game board to complete the brand positioning statement workshop.
2. Once you have completed all of the steps, you have successfully developed a brand positioning statement for your own brand.

By following the steps on the game board, you will be better equipped to communicate your brand's unique value proposition and position yourself in the market. It will also provide a framework for tracking and measuring the success of your brand positioning efforts.

Branding Strategy

A branding strategy helps you understand who your audience is and what they want, so that you can create a product that meets their needs.

Branding strategies can help you make the right decisions about price, packaging, and marketing. They can also help you understand how to reach your audience and how to build relationships with them.

How will you measure the success of your brand strategy and make adjustments as needed?

---

What messages will you use to engage your target audience and build relationships with them?

Content Strategy

A content strategy is a plan for creating and distributing content that will help you reach your marketing goals. It's not just about creating content—it's also about deciding what kind of content to create, how much of it you need, and how often you need it.

It's also about making sure that all of your content is consistent with your brand, which means that if you have multiple channels (like a website, social media pages, and email newsletters), all of those channels should be saying the same thing in a way that feels authentic to your brand.

Digital Marketing Channels Strategy

A digital marketing channels strategy is a plan for how you'll use different online platforms to reach your target audience. This way, you can prioritize your efforts in various digital marketing channels, such as social media and SEO. It's important to have a plan for how you will distribute your content and promote it so that you can make sure that everything is getting the attention it needs.

For example, if your target audience is people who want to learn about nutrition and exercise, you could use Facebook to post updates about the latest research on health, Instagram to share images of healthy meals, Pinterest to pin recipes and workout ideas, Twitter as a way to answer questions related to nutrition and fitness, etc.

It's more than just choosing one or two social media platforms or deciding which email marketing software to use. It's about identifying the best way to connect with your customers and then implementing a plan that will make that connection happen on a consistent basis.

Create A Digital Marketing Plan

A digital marketing plan helps you prioritize and organize your online marketing efforts. Having one can ensure that your web presence aligns with your company's overall business goals. A digital marketing plan also minimizes the risk of miscommunication between teams responsible for different aspects of online marketing.

A good digital marketing plan will include all of the following:

- An overview of your business, including its mission statement, target market, and competition
- Details about the current state of your company's website and social media channels
- A list of goals for each area of digital marketing (for example, growing brand awareness or increasing traffic to your website)

Activity

Using the below table, business owners can follow the steps to create a digital marketing plan that is tailored to their needs. The table can also be used to track their progress and make any necessary adjustments to their plan as they work to achieve their digital marketing goals.

Digital Marketing Plan Table

| Step | Action  | Description   |
|------|---|---|
| 1    | Conduct a digital marketing audit             | Identify the current state of your company's online presence and research your competition.                         |
| 2    | Develop goals for your digital marketing plan | Create specific, measurable, achievable, relevant, and time-bound (SMART) goals for each area of digital marketing. |
| 3    | Create a digital marketing strategy           | Outline how you will achieve your digital marketing goals.  |
| 4    | Consider resources                            | Determine the budget, personnel, tools, and technology needed to implement your strategy.                           |
| 5    | Create a timeline                             | Develop a timeline with specific milestones and deadlines for achieving your goals.                                 |
| 6    | Review and update                             | Regularly review and update your digital marketing plan to stay on track and make any necessary adjustments.        |

Create Digital Marketing Identities

A digital marketing identity is a way to tell your story and connect with your audience. It can be a blog, a website, an app, or an e-commerce store—anywhere you tell your customers who you are and what you stand for.

Creating a digital marketing identity helps you build trust with your customers by showing them who you are and what's important to you. It also helps them find you when they're looking for what you do

It's the first step to creating a brand that people know and love. Your digital marketing identity should be consistent and easy to find and remember, and it should reflect your brand values.

Here are some reasons why it's important:

It helps you reach more customers. Having a website or blog allows you to reach people all over the world who may not otherwise have found out about your business through traditional advertising methods like flyers or billboards.

It drives traffic to your website/blog/app/eCommerce store, where people can learn more about what your business offers and provide valuable information on how they can benefit from doing business with you!

It shows that you're serious about your company's success! If someone visits your website or reads one of your blog posts and sees that it looks professionally made, they'll have more confidence in buying from you because they know that someone cares enough about their company's success.

Step 3:

Promote

Get Relevant Traffic To Your Business

Getting relevant traffic to your business is necessary for several reasons. First, it helps you reach your target audience. By focusing your efforts on the channels and strategies that are most effective for reaching your target audience, you can ensure that your marketing efforts are not wasted on people who are not interested in your products or services.

Second, relevant traffic can help you achieve your marketing goals. If your goal is to generate leads, for example, getting relevant traffic to your website can help you attract visitors who are more likely to be interested in your products or services and convert them into leads.

Third, relevant traffic can help you build relationships with your customers. By providing valuable content and engaging with your audience on social media, you can build trust and loyalty with your customers, leading to repeat business and positive word-of-mouth.

Overall, getting relevant traffic to your business is important for reaching your target audience, achieving your marketing goals, and building relationships with your customers. By focusing on strategies that can help you attract relevant traffic, you can increase the success of your digital marketing efforts.

Activity

Getting Relevant Traffic Table

| Step | Action                          | Description  |
|------|---------------------------------|--|
| 1    | Identify target audience        | Research the demographics, interests, and needs of the customers you want to reach.                    |
| 2    | Research effective channels     | Identify the digital marketing channels that are most effective for reaching your target audience.     |
| 3    | Develop a plan for each channel | Outline what content you will create and distribute through each channel and how often you will do so. |
| 4    | Implement and track             | Implement your plan and track the results to see if you are reaching your target audience.             |
| 5    | Adjust as needed                | Based on your results, make any necessary adjustments to your plan to improve your results.            |

Thoughts, Feelings, & Notes

Step 4:

Analyze

Monitoring performance is necessary to analyze the results of your marketing efforts for each platform or channel used. For the best results, it's essential to ensure that each channel you use performs up to par. And monitoring performance allows you to see how well each channel is doing.

This way, you can adjust your strategy if one of your channels isn't producing the desired results.

You need to understand:

- What audiences you're reaching?
- How you're acquiring them?
- What their behavior is like after being acquired?
- Whether or not they are converting into customers?

You'll be able to see how well your audience is responding, if you're getting the right audience and how they're interacting with your content, and whether the audience you're reaching is converting into customers.

Step 5: Optimize

The most important reason that it's essential to make changes for improvement based on analysis of the results of your marketing plan is that it allows you to get better at what you do. You know that you're doing something right when people keep coming back, and you also know that there are certain things that need to be improved. If you're not seeing the desired results, you need to look at what went wrong and fix it. You can't expect things to improve if you just keep doing what you've always done.

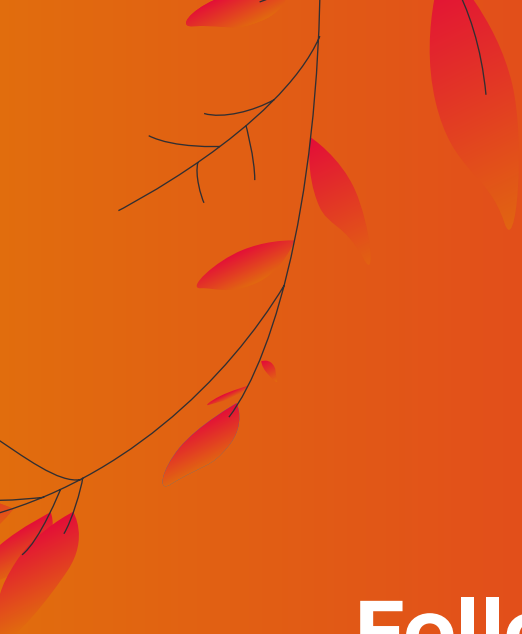

The best strategy to implement these changes is to make sure that you have a solid plan in place before making any changes. Your plan should be based on what the data tells you. If there are certain things that worked well and others that didn't, then you can use this information to guide your next steps. You also need to consider how all of these different factors interact with each other—for example, if people aren't engaging with your content on social media, maybe they'd be more likely to engage if it were more visually appealing.

If you don't have a plan, it will be difficult for anyone who isn't part of the team to understand what needs fixing and how they can help get the job done.

Here is what you can do:

1. Identify your marketing goals. What are you trying to achieve with your marketing efforts? Are you trying to increase brand awareness, generate leads, drive sales, or something else?
2. Collect data on the performance of your marketing efforts. This could involve using analytics tools, surveying your customers, or conducting market research.
3. Analyze the data to identify areas for improvement. Are certain channels or strategies performing better than others? Are there any gaps in your marketing efforts?
4. Develop a plan for optimizing your marketing efforts. This plan should be based on the data you collected and should include specific actions that you will take to improve the performance of your marketing efforts.
5. Implement your plan and track the results. Are your efforts generating the desired results? Are you achieving your marketing goals?
6. Adjust your plan as needed. Based on your results, what changes can you make to your plan to improve your results?

Following this activity can help business owners optimize their digital marketing
efforts and achieve their marketing goals.

It can also help them track their progress and make any necessary adjustments to their strategy as they work to improve their results.
